

The Vermont Assistive Technology Program

supports Vermonters with disabilities and age-related needs, in education, work, and in their communities through the use of Assistive Technology. We partner with the University of Vermont's Center on Disability and Community Inclusion (CDCI). We offer services to all Vermonters. There are no eligibility requirements. Funding is provided by the Federal Administration for Community Living.

Tryout Centers

Our tryout centers are jointly managed with the University of Vermont's Center on Disability and Community Inclusion (CDCI). We offer services statewide.

Burlington AT Tryout Center:

Testimonial: “I want to thank you, thank you, thank you, and I could go on and on and on. I don’t remember how I became aware of you and your program, however, when I met you, it was my lucky day!” – L.D.

Services for Individuals

Information & Assistance

Answers to your questions regarding Assistive Technology devices, services, funding, and other AT related topics.

Device Demonstrations

Make an appointment with your local tryout center for a demonstration of specific AT devices or software. A virtual or hands-on demo can help you, a consumer and/or their representatives, make an informed decision about what tools may work best for you.

Borrow Devices

Try assistive technology for free at home, school, work, or in the community! Equipment can be borrowed for up to 30 days from any Tryout Center. It will be shipped free to you with a pre-paid return label.

Services for Organizations

Public Awareness

Our AT Tryout Centers are available for outreach events such as open houses, support group meetings, and professional meetings or conferences.

Group Training

These workshops are designed to increase knowledge and skills. They may feature a category of equipment or an individual device and may be related to specific disabilities or environments. This is a fee-based service.

Technical Assistance

Need a deeper dive into specific AT or accessibility topics? For a fee and based on availability, our staff can work with you to analyze your requirements and help your organization successfully implement specific AT solutions.
